AN AIR OF MYSTERY PRECEDES CLIMAX

Secretary Bryan's Movements Yesterday Premonition of Break With the President.
ABSENCE FROM CABINET ADDS TO WONDERMENT
Disclosure of Premier's Resignation Comes Late in Afternoon After Series of Surprises.

Mr. Bryan evidently considered himself all day yesterday as out of the administration. He did not go to the cabinet meeting at the White House at the usual hour in the morning from a feeling of delicacy, his resignation having already been placed in the hands of the President, and it was not until that meeting had been in progress for an hour and a request had been telephoned him from the White House that he joined the President's cabinet advisers and his late chief.

He explained his delay of an hour, in speaking with the newspaper men, as he entered the White House, by the statement that he had been engaged upon important work at the State Department.

Denying himself to newspaper men twice during the day at his usual time for receiving them, the Secretary thereby aroused suspicion that something unusual had occurred. After the cabinet meeting Mr. Bryan entertained the other members of the cabinet at lunch at the University Club and then he returned to his office, accompanied by Secretary Daniels, who remained for a few minutes. Later Secretary Daniels steadfastly refrained from discussing what had occurred at the cabinet meeting.

Secretary Bryan was at the State Department until 3:30 o'clock, and during the afternoon saw Mr. De Gams, the Brazilian ambassador. A few minutes before leaving, the Secretary dropped into the office of Counselor Lansing for a brief chat with the man who took up his portfolio today.

Maintains Attitude of Silence.
"There is nothing to be said," Mr. Bryan remarked to a group of newspaper men as he left Counselor Lansing's office. That was a few minutes before it had been officially learned that the resignation had been submitted and accepted. "There is much speculation abroad," some one suggested to the Secretary. "Well," Mr. Bryan responded with a smile, "you know there is a law against speculation in futures. You gentlemen want to be very careful about speculation in futures, you know."

Then he joined Mrs. Bryan, who awaited him in an automobile. They rode for half an hour, returning to their home about 6 o'clock. Mr. Bryan had just prepared to go out for dinner when a reporter for the Associated Press reached the house. The Secretary was attired in evening clothes and appeared in a jovial mood.

"My Secretary, we are informed that you have resigned," "Where did you get that information?" he asked, sharply. "I would like to be thoroughly informed about such an occurrence before I discuss it."

Admits His Resignation.
When assured that announcement of his resignation had been made from the White House Mr. Bryan at once verified the news and asked if an interchange of letters between the President and himself had been made public. This, he learned, had been done.

"The letters," said Mr. Bryan, "state the reasons for my resignation, showing that it was purely a personal difference of opinion as to what course should be taken with regard to the American reply to the German note. I would like to say more, but cannot do so at this time. It would not be appropriate for me to make public my statement regarding the situation until the note has been forwarded to the German government."

"What are your plans for the future?" "Well," Mr. Bryan began, just as Mrs. Bryan appeared at the door to remind him that he must hasten. "We have only twelve minutes," Mrs. Bryan said.

"All right, I will be right there," the Secretary answered, turning again to the correspondent. He continued: "We will remain in Washington for a while, where we will go or what we will do I cannot say at this time. Our plans, necessarily, are not matured."

By this time the Secretary was walking toward the automobile to join Mrs. Bryan. They had started to leave the grounds when Secretary Daniels, driving by, hailed them. Mr. Bryan and Mr. Daniels talked for a few minutes before the Bryans hastened on to keep their engagement.

Forerunner of Climax.
Events during the day about the State Department seemed to fore-shadow a sensational climax. The situation from early morning until late at night was a strained one. When Secretary Bryan reached his office early in the morning he wore a troubled look. This had worn off later in the day, particularly after the luncheon with other cabinet members. Those who saw the Secretary early in the day attributed his manner to the gravity of the situation relating to the German negotiations, and this curiosity was aroused until 11 o'clock, the hour for the cabinet meeting, had passed.

Usually on cabinet days the Secretary does not give audience to newspaper men, but meets them in the corridor and asks them to wait until he has seen the President.

Yesterday more than thirty newspaper men were waiting outside the Secretary's door. It was five minutes after the cabinet hour and Mr. Bryan did not appear. The waiting party grew impatient, and a tone another and wondered about the delay.

"I had been going to the cabinet meeting," they asked. "Do you suppose he's resigned?"

Detained by Important Business.
Ten minutes later word was sent in asking the Secretary if he would see the newspaper men. Mr. Bryan directed a reply that he was detained from the cabinet by important business.

When he appeared at last, just before noon, he was smiling, he greeted the anxious group with:

"Well, will you walk with me?" Every man of them followed, directing rapid-fire questions.

"I had an important business which detained me," Mr. Bryan answered to all, and no more information came from him until after his announcement from the White House.

Degree for Each of Two District Men
Elbridge Johnson Casselman of Washington and Lewis William Prescott of Takoma Park yesterday had the degree of bachelor of science conferred on them at the Institute of Technology by the president of the institution, Richard Cockburn McLaughlin. The titles of their graduation theses were, for Mr. Casselman, "The Oxidation of Tin as Determined by Equilibrium Measurements," and for Mr. Prescott, "An Investigation of the Change in Young's Modulus for Steel With Change in Temperature," an exceedingly technical subject in which Harold R. Bennett of Bridgeport, Conn., was his collaborator.
